

DAILY SUNNAH · THE SUNNAH SYSTEM

The Sunnah System

A 30-habit deen tracker, with weekly muhasabah built in.

Track your deen the way you would track anything you take seriously — by what you actually do, reviewed honestly each week. Thirty sunnah habits across salah, Qur'an, dhikr, character, and wellness, on one page.

How to run the system

This is a weekly tracker. Print one per week, or fill it in any PDF annotator. Do not aim to fill every box — aim to fill the same boxes every day. Mastery is consistency, not coverage.

1

Start with three, not thirty.

Choose three habits you are not yet consistent with. Track only those for two weeks. Add more once they hold. The full grid is the destination, not week one.

2

Anchor each to a prayer.

Every habit here can be tied to a salah you already pray. The prayer is the cue. Write your anchor where the row allows it.

3

Shrink, never skip.

On a hard day, do the smallest version and still fill the box. A small rep keeps the circuit alive; a miss breaks it.

4

Review every week.

Page four is the muhasabah review. Five honest minutes each week is what turns a tracker into change. Do not skip it — it is the engine.

"The most beloved of deeds to Allah are those that are most consistent, even if they are few."

Prophet Muhammad ﷺ — Sahih al-Bukhari 6464 (Sahih) · sunnah.com/bukhari:6464

The whole system is built on this one principle. Few and constant. Let it set your expectations and protect you from the ambition that breaks most habits in week one.

That is the full thirty. Remember rule one: track three to start, not all of them. The rest are here for when you are ready.

Weekly muhasabah review

Five honest minutes at the end of each week. This is what turns a checklist into change — the tracker shows you what happened; the review decides what changes next week.

LOOK BACK

1. Which habit held most consistently this week? What made it easy?

2. Which one slipped? Was it the act, or was it the anchor (the cue)?

LOOK FORWARD

3. What is the ONE habit I am giving my attention to next week?

4. What is the smallest version of it I will never skip?

THE HONEST SCORE

How consistent was I overall this week?

Qur'an 59:18 · quran.com/59/18

Muhasabah — taking account of oneself — is the practice this whole system serves. The boxes are only useful if, once a week, we sit with them honestly and adjust.
